Strategy for the Liberation of Palestine

Arabic: Strategy for the Liberation of Palestine

Today, we mark the 49th anniversary of the founding of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) on June 11, 1967 out of the impact of the defeat of June 5. The founding of the PFLP was a direct result of the rubble of defeat, on an intellectual, political, and struggling level, to build a new movement for the revolution, struggle, and national liberation movement against the Zionist occupation. We salute thousands of martyrs, prisoners, wounded, and strugglers, among the martyrs and strugglers of the Palestinian people, the Arab nation, and the international community. We salute them today with the highest regard and pride in them and their legacy. They have formed a historic and distinguished legacy and history of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Palestinian national movement overall.

In light of the ongoing international, regional and Arab situation and the new weakness and division in the Palestinian internal situation, the Palestinian national movement is more now than ever before. Therefore, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine proposes the following:

First, the need for a serious, comprehensive national dialogue to review the current situation and to develop a unified strategy for our national liberation movement. This includes the need to strengthen institutions and popular unions, especially the Palestine Liberation Organization, and to build an environment and infrastructure of internal democracy that is necessary to support the collective national struggle. It is critical to support the steadfastness of the national movement and concrete action, to affirm their roots in their land and attachment to the land, and to support the national movement outside Palestine, in the homeland and in exile and diaspora.

Second, the critical urgency to completely abandon the Oslo agreement and consequences for Palestinian rights, struggles, national goals, and the overreliance on the path of negotiations and rejection of the pressure to affirm the need for full implementation of the rights of the Palestinian people. We reject any political initiatives aimed at imposing an alternative international rights of the Palestinian people.

Third, the need to end Palestinian internal division and restore national unity without continuing to rely on international or regional powers whose interests are against the people, or our rights.

Fourth, the need to hold a unified Palestinian National Council under preparation commission agreed upon in Cairo, and to reject any monopolistic call to control only the further development of the intellectual, organizational and political damage to the Palestinian movement and led it to the current dangerous situation.

Fifth, the need to use all forms and methods of struggle in the context of the enemy. No form of struggle is a replacement for another.

Sixth, the necessity to support all acts of struggle and the mass movements in Jerusalem intifada, and for all forces to provide an organizational and political support to the popular struggle.

Seventh, the development of a comprehensive national plan to support the people and popular efforts in order to seek their freedom and raise their struggle for it. The PFLP raises its highest salutes and appreciation to all of the heroic prisoners, including our comrade, the leader Bilal Kayed, and the two imprisoned comrades, Anas Shadid and Ahmad Abu Fara.

Eighth, we call on the forces of Arab liberation to recapture the vision of the seriousness of the current situation in the Arab region, to be free of internal divisions. This comes amid the accelerating normalization with the enemy and states disintegrate. The Palestinian struggle is at the heart of the Arab cause.

Ninth, we stand with our Arab peoples in Syria, Iraq, Libya, Yemen, Egypt, and to confront sectarianism and sectarian divisions and reactionary violence under the banner of the resistance to such forces.

Tenth, we urge the expansion of the international struggle alongside all forces for the world, and all who stand with the struggle of the Arab and Palestinian people. In particular, we salute all of those involved in the campaigns for the boycott of Israel.

As it enters its fiftieth year, the PFLP will continue to struggle based on a clear
